2: Pathways to the Law

Overview

Westlaw Canada is the only online research tool in Canada designed with the whole research process in mind – with the awareness that the goal of research is not just to find cases on point but rather to discover the law.

Westlaw Canada gives you everything you need to get the full picture of the law:

- Primary Sources – not only gives you the decisions and legislation that make up the law, it also includes supporting documents: court filings, legislative history and pending legislation, which lets you look behind decisions and current legislation to get a fuller picture.
- Secondary Sources:
 - Finding Tools – organize the law by issue and enable you to discover and tie together all the relevant authorities – The Canadian Abridgment Digests, Citators (case and legislative), Words & Phrases and the Index to Canadian Legal Literature. These research tools provide a valuable alternative or supplemental strategy to finding the law.
 - Analysis/Commentary – explains the law in Canada, including the CED, leading loose leaf services, newsletters, texts, law reviews and journals and Legal Memorandum.

All of this material is tied together into an interface designed to integrate different information components to keep you moving on the right path towards your goal – to find not just the relevant primary law but to ensure the necessary content and to create a winning legal argument.

Selecting a Pathway

Choose the pathway that makes sense for the legal issue you are researching: you can begin your research broadly, getting an overview of the issue, or more narrowly, by finding a decision or legislative provision on point. No matter how you begin, Westlaw Canada's network of links ensures that you can move quickly and intuitively through all the relevant sources to get the full picture of the law.

Here are outlines of two possible strategies you may find useful. Within each of these strategies there may be various options you might use depending on the particular problem and the information you have.

Strategy A – Begin with an overview:

- To get an overview of the issue ➤ Use the CED and other commentary
- To find case law by issue ➤ Use The Canadian Abridgment Digests
- To read relevant cases ➤ Use the full text case law
- To note up relevant cases ➤ Use KeyCite Canada
- Get legal analysis from secondary source citing references

Strategy B – Begin by finding a leading case:

- Perform a keyword search to find full text cases on point
- Link to Abridgment Digests to find other cases on the same issue
- To read relevant cases ➤ Use the full text case law
- To note up relevant cases ➤ Use KeyCite Canada
- Put it all together with analysis from the CED and other secondary source citing references

Analysis/Commentary

Canadian Encyclopedic Digest

The CED, published since 1913, written by expert authors, provides an overview of the law, with references to supporting cases, statutory provisions and authoritative legal commentary. There are over 225 subject areas on every aspect of Canadian law and practice. The digest paragraphs are organized under major headings and subheadings within each subject title and include cross-references to other related subjects along with a link to the equivalent section in The Canadian Abridgment classification.

The CED may be used to answer your legal question directly and succinctly, or it may serve as a centre point from which to conduct research, directing you to primary sources you may wish to examine more closely by referring to the authorities cited in the footnotes.

Legal Memoranda and Points of Law

Westlaw Canada contains a Legal Memoranda and Points of Law collection that is an excellent starting point for your legal research, if you can find one on your specific issue.

Every memo provides objective analysis of precise issues in specific fact-scenarios and particular legal contexts. It identifies critical details about the memo, including the author and most recent update and is reviewed for currency within three years of this date. Points of Law are similar to legal memos but are based on legal issue rather than a fact scenario. Both include links to cases, legislation and cite commentary.

The collection substantially concentrates in at least 10 areas of law, including:

- Personal Injury
- Insurance
- Labour and Employment
- Criminal
- Estates and Trusts
- Family
- Municipal
- Real Property
- Corporate
- Commercial and Business

Memos exist in other topical areas, but in small numbers. As this collection expands over time, so too will its topical and jurisdictional coverage.

Legal Memos and Points of Law is available as a subscription, though non-subscribers may view individual memos on a pay-per-view basis. All Westlaw Canada users may access the Summary documents without charge, regardless of subscription.

Author:
TVA | The Legal Outsourcing Network

Jurisdiction: Ontario

Date of Research: January 1, 2007

Updated Date: September 1, 2010

Legal Issue:
When a commercial property is found to have been contaminated by a gasoline leak from an adjacent gas station several years previous, are the environmental assessors who indicated at the time of sale that there was no contamination liable to the plaintiff purchaser of the property? And could the Ministry of the Environment be liable for negligently signing off on the previous spill?

Fact Scenario:
The plaintiff purchased a commercial property adjacent to the defendant gas station which had operated there for several decades. The plaintiff ordered an environmental assessment prior to the closing date which concluded that there were no environmental concerns with the property. After purchasing the property, the plaintiff leased it to the provincial government. During a recent renovation of the property's basement, the plaintiff dug into the ground beneath the basement and immediately detected a strong smell of gasoline. At the plaintiff's request, the Ministry of the Environment assessed the property; the dirt removed from the area indicated that it was saturated with gasoline. The Ministry put the gas station on notice regarding its findings. As a result of the investigation, the plaintiff learned that 10 years before he purchased the property, the gas station had had a significant accidental spill, and spent considerable efforts to clean it up. The Ministry of the Environment would have attended at that time to approve the clean up efforts and in some way "sign off" on it. The recently detected seepage is not a new leak, but from the leak 10 years ago. Plaintiff's counsel is considering bringing actions against: the gas station on the previous owners of the building; the assessor that the plaintiff hired 10 years prior to the purchase; the Ministry of the Environment (for "signing off" on the cleanup efforts following the previous spill).

Other Key Words:
environmental harm, toxic real estate, contamination, gasoline leak, potential defendant, Crown liability

CONCLUSION:
The environmental assessor who gave the plaintiff's property the "all clear" could also possibly be found responsible for his role in inducing the plaintiff to enter into an agreement to purchase, which he otherwise might not have done had he known of the contamination, although there is little case law on this exact point.

There appears to be no case law where the Ministry of the Environment was sued for improper or negligent oversight of a spill clean-up. Further, there are potential privity problems in terms of the purchaser relying on the Ministry's actions in relation to the property which occurred 10 years prior to the purchase.

ANALYSIS:
[Wolverine Tube \(Canada\) Inc. v. Noranda Metal Industries Ltd. \(1994\), 21 O.R. \(3d\) 264 \(Ont. Gen. Div.\); affirmed \[1995\], 26 O.R. \(3d\) 577 \(Ont. C.A.\)](#)

The defendant was retained by a company as a general consultant on environmental issues. The consulting agreement stipulated that the reports prepared by the defendant were not to be used outside company's organization without prior written permission. After 2 years, the company requested that the defendant conduct environmental compliance audits and liability assessments to assist it in the sale of its properties. Due to time constraints, the defendant agreed to do the work on a "best efforts" basis. The defendant submitted reports which included disclaimers of any responsibility to third parties relying upon or making decisions based on the reports. The company negotiated a sale of its properties to the plaintiff. It advised the plaintiff that it could rely on the reports. The plaintiff did not obtain the defendant's prior written permission. The different position vis-à-vis the members of the proposed class than they would stand in relation to members of the public generally. There is therefore an insufficient proximity to give rise to the duty of care.

And see: Mr. Justice Todd L. Archibald & Michael G. Cochrane, Annual Review of Civil Litigation, Thomson Reuters Canada, 2004, Chapter B—Civil Liability for Environmental Torts.

FURTHER SUGGESTED RESEARCH:
As no case law was found where the Ministry of the Environment was held liable for its role in the clean up of an environmental spill, further research could be done for other analogous situations where a duty of care is owed by a government department or agency serving in an oversight or supervisory capacity.

The Canadian Abridgment Case Digests

A Short Guide to The Canadian Abridgment

Published since 1933, The Canadian Abridgment Case Digests is a comprehensive collection of summaries of Canadian legal decisions. Digests are organized by subject followed by a detailed classification scheme allowing you to easily pinpoint cases that are specific to your case.

Generally, you will see three styles of digests:

- Narrative: Written for more important cases such as Supreme Court of Canada and other appellate judgments.
- Caption-only: Written for cases that do not fall into the above category but that are regarded as being significant or having some potential value as precedents.
- Classification-only: Written for cases in which well-established legal principles are applied to familiar fact situations, and in which no novel or significant points of law arise.

The Canadian Abridgment Case Digests is a great place to begin your research on any legal issue as it brings together, in an easily viewable format, digests of every case dealing with that issue. By browsing through these digests you can identify the decisions and then link to their full text.

Words & Phrases Judicially Defined

Words & Phrases

Words & Phrases

Published as part of The Canadian Abridgment since 1993, Words & Phrases Judicially Defined provides judicial interpretations of statutory and common law terms from the 1800's to the present. It includes approximately 70,000 Canadian interpretations of 30,000 terms, making it by far the largest service of its kind available in Canada in any medium. Cross-references appear both in the Result List and on each document to link you to related entries.

Interpretations are organized within the Words & Phrases entry by jurisdiction. Each interpretation contains: the paragraph number, relevant passage from the decision, the subject area, name, citation, court level and judge(s) of the decision.

Words & Phrases Judicially Defined is available to all LawSource subscribers.

KeyCiting Legislation No Longer in Force: You can KeyCite provisions of legislation that have been repealed or are no longer in force to see judicial (and other) treatments of that provision. For example, if you KeyCite the Criminal Code, section 200, you will see separate entries for each of the following:

- Canada Federal Statutes; Criminal Code; Part VII – Disorderly Houses, Gaming and Betting; Search; R.S.C. 1985, c. C-46, s. 200; 200
- Canada Federal Statutes; Canada Federal Statutes – Criminal Code, 1892, S.C. 1892, c. 29, s. 200, S.C. 1892, c. 29, s. 200; s. 200(2)
- Canada Federal Statutes; Canada Federal Statutes – Criminal Code, R.S.C. 1970, c. – 34, s. 200; R.S.C. 1970, c. C-34, s. 200; s. 200

Note: Be aware that often provisions are re-numbered when a new consolidation comes out. There is no guarantee that all of the section 200s listed above deal with the same issue.

Narrowing your Citing References List (Limit KeyCite Display)

Click the Limit KeyCite Display button located on the bottom left side of the Citing References page to limit the list of citing references to only those you want.

You can limit, in any combination, by search term, jurisdiction, case law citation frequency, judicial treatments, legislative subsection/clause, date, and document type.

A screenshot of the KeyCite Canada web interface. On the left, there is a "Related Info" tab with a sub-tab "Citing References" selected. An orange box labeled "Related Info tab: Citing References" has an arrow pointing to this sub-tab. Below the "Citing References" sub-tab, there is a "Limit KeyCite Display" button, which is also highlighted with an orange box and an arrow from another orange box labeled "Limit KeyCite Display". The main content area shows a list of cases citing a specific section of the Criminal Code. The list includes cases like "R. v. Tunney", "R. v. Lawler", "R. v. Grenke", "R. v. Francis", "R. v. O'Brien", and "R. v. Pedersen". At the bottom of the page, there is a green icon with a dollar sign and the text "$0.00".

Additional Searching Methods

Determining your Best Search Method

Natural Language

Natural Language searching, which is available for most databases, allows you to use plain English in your query to retrieve relevant documents.

Enter a description of your issue and Westlaw Canada retrieves a maximum of 100 documents that statistically best match the concepts in your description. Westlaw Canada identifies legal phrases in your description (such as state of mind), removes common terms (such as is and for), and generates variations of terms (such as defamed, defaming and defamation from defame).

Click Natural Language Search located in the top right corner of any Custom Search Template to access the Natural Language search template.

Click OK to return to your search template and then click Search to run your search.

Edit Search vs. Locate in Result

Back to Strategies

Modifying a Search

Edit Search is used to modify an existing search by adding or removing keywords or changing other search parameters or to create a brand new search altogether.

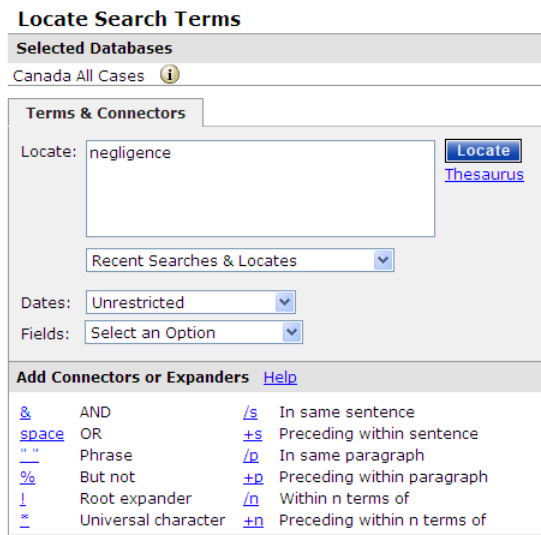

Locate in Result is used to refine an existing search. It allows you to add further restrictions to a search you have just performed – to search within your search results. This is the preferred (and more efficient) method for refining a search.

Both Edit Search and Locate in Result are located at the top of the tabs in the left frame.

Click Edit Search to retrieve the template you used to create the initial search. The current search remains intact. Modify your search and click Go to run your new search.

Click Locate in Result to retrieve the Locate Search Terms template. Enter your term(s) into the Locate box provided and click Locate.  $0.00

| = | Universal character | +n | Preceding within n terms of |

The Result list contains only those documents that match your locate terms. The documents are not re-numbered after running your locate search. They retain their original position from your original search.

Note: If you wish to see where your locate term(s) is in relation to your original search term(s), you must re-enter the search into the Locate box along with your locate term(s). You can use the Recent Searches & Locates drop-down list to retrieve your original search.

Structuring Techniques

Using Boolean Connectors & Expanders

Tips for Structuring your Search

- Define your issue before you start.
- Keep your search simple. Determine what the single most important issue is and use those terms. Don't worry about retrieving too many documents. You can always refine your search later by using Locate in Result.
- Consult resources like The Canadian Abridgment Digests, CED, journals/law reviews and the online thesaurus to help identify appropriate terminology.
- If you're not sure what terms to use then search using Natural Language.

Choosing Search Terms

Tips for Searching Part I: Choosing Search Terms

Choose terms that are significant to your issue and avoid using terms that are too common, such as be and with.

Consider adding alternative terms to your query. If you are searching for good faith you may also consider adding bad faith.

Use the Thesaurus accessible from the Natural Language and Terms and Connectors search template.

Considering Variations of Word Forms

When choosing search terms consider the various forms they may take. For example, when you search for liable consider searching for liability.

Plurals

If you enter the singular form of a term, Westlaw Canada automatically retrieves the plural form as well. This is true for all regular and most irregular plurals. Examples: computer retrieves computer and computers, woman retrieves woman and women. However, if you enter the plural form, only the plural is retrieved. TIP: To retrieve damage but not damages, enter it as follows: #damage.

Possessives

If you enter the non-possessive form of a term, Westlaw Canada automatically retrieves the singular and plural possessive form as well. Example: customer retrieves customer, customers, customer's and customers'. However, if you enter the possessive form, only that possessive form is retrieved.

Compound Terms

To retrieve all forms of a compound term use its hyphenated form. Example: good-will retrieves good-will, goodwill and good will. If you do not include the hyphen you will not retrieve all variant forms.

Abbreviations

To retrieve all variations of an abbreviation enter the term with periods and without spaces. Also, it's a good idea to include the words or phrase from which the abbreviation is derived. Example: c.b.c. retrieves c.b.c., cbc and c b c.

Root Expander

Use the root expander (!) to retrieve words with variant endings. When you place the root expander at the end of a root term you retrieve all forms of that root. Example: drink! retrieves drink, drinks, drinking, drinker, etc.

Universal Character

Place the universal character (*) in the middle or at the end of a term, (but not at the beginning) to replace one character in the term. Examples: host retrieves host, hosts, hostess, hosting and hostile, *kn*w* retrieves know and knew.

Boolean Connectors

Tips for Searching – Part II: Constructing Complex Searches

Boolean connectors are symbols you place between your search terms to specify the relationship between them.

Click Searching Tips on any Custom Search Template to see a list of all connectors available in Westlaw Canada.

You can use any combination of the following connectors to structure your search:

| Use | To retrieve documents containing: |
|--------------|--|
| a space (or) | Any or all terms. This is the default connector. Example: car automobile |
| & (and) | All search terms. Example: narcotics & warrant |
| /p | Search terms in the same paragraph. Example: hearsay /p utterance |
| +p | The first term preceding the second within the same paragraph. Example: appeal +p held |
| /s | Search terms in the same sentence. Example: design /s defect |
| +s | The first term preceding the second within the same sentence. Example: palsgraf +s island |
| /n | Search terms within n terms of each other (where n is a number). Example: support /3 payment |
| +n | The first search term preceding the second by n terms (where n is a number) Example: justice +3 McLachlin |
| “ ” | Terms in this same order. Example: “attractive nuisance” |

| Use | To exclude documents containing |
|------------|--|
| %(but not) | Search terms following the percent symbol. Example: support /3 payment % spousal |

Order of Processing

Connectors are processed in the following order:

“ ” (phrase), space (or), +n, /n, +s, /s, +p, /p, &, %

Note: Parentheses can be used to change the order of the search.

Back to About this Guide

Overview

Westlaw Canada access is provided based on a flat-rate, annual subscription. You pay a fixed amount for as much usage as you need for an entire year. We do not track the amount of time you spend online.

Within your subscription, some actions or functions have a suggested usage value and some do not. You are not charged or invoiced for any suggested usage values within your subscription. These values are used by firms who wish to charge their research back to clients for cost recovery purposes.

Firms may adjust the suggested usage values and develop their own cost recovery strategy in order to charge back to their clients at their discretion. An in-house Corporate Administrator can be assigned to run a Chargeback Report from the Westlaw Canada Reporting System should you wish to charge your research back to your clients.

If you access content outside your subscription, you will receive an invoice. This is considered a pay-per-view charge. A warning screen appears before the action is completed allowing you to cancel the action.

Although KeyCite Canada may be part of your subscription, running a KeyCite Alert at a daily or weekday (Mon-Fri) frequency triggers a charge for each alert that is run. You will be invoiced for these charges.

This icon and the dollar amounts you see throughout this guide represent the suggested usage values for the specific function/content.

Pay-per-View Documents

Top 5 strategies for Minimizing Client Research Fees for Cost Recovery Purposes

Use FIND whenever possible

If you know the name or citation of the case or legislation you want, use Find. Finding has a lower transactional value than searching.

Maximize your SEARCH results

Documents retrieved by a search are included in the transactional value of the search. You may browse, print, email or download these documents without incurring any additional values. Try to capture as many documents as possible that are relevant to your issue by using broad terms and minimize the use of field restrictions. Up to 10,000 documents can be displayed.

Avoid “Edit Search” – Use “Locate in Result”

Editing a search is treated as a new search and therefore incurs another transactional value. Use Locate in Result to refine your search. Locate in Result is included in the value of the search. It is best to run a fairly broad initial search (see tip above) and then use Locate in Result to target documents. Use Locate in Result as many times as you wish to refine your search until you find documents on point without triggering any additional transactional values.

Narrow your Citing References List

Use Limit KeyCite Display to refine your Citing References. No transactional values are accrued. Maximize your efficiency by using Locate to identify key search terms in the KeyCite results.

Access the Research Trail to re-visit your search

Use your Research Trail to re-run a search or retrieve a document (indicated by a black dot) without incurring any additional transactional values for the remainder of the day (up to 2:00am).

Guidelines for Writing Legal Memoranda*

The purpose of the legal memorandum is to answer one or more legal questions in the context of a specific set of facts. It should contain a thorough analysis of the relevant law and provide a well-reasoned answer to the questions posed.

Generally speaking there are seven main sections:

1. Heading – Your name, date, client involved and subject matter.
2. Introduction – Additional information on client, why the questions were asked and how the answers will be applied.
3. Facts – Detailed description of the relevant facts.
4. Issues – Outline the issues (and sub-issues) you have been asked to analyze. Frame them in terms of questions that you will ultimately answer. This is an on-going process.
5. Conclusion – Summarize the analysis and answer the questions set out in the Issues section.
6. Analysis – The facts are applied to the law to answer the questions posed. You should follow the sequence set out in the Issues section.
7. List of Authorities – Every statement must be supported by the case law and legislation you referenced or relied upon.
8. Bibliography – Include a list of all secondary sources consulted.

Note: The law firm or department where you work may have its own memorandum template that you must use, and may look different than the one described above.
